IC Realtime's Green Approach

Pompano Beach, FL – August 10, 2008 – IC Realtime LLC. wants to clarify to all our customers that all IC Realtime's products are earth friendly and meet the strict standard of European Union's RoHS Directive.

RoHS – Restriction of Hazardous Substances Directive is an EU law adopted in February 2003 and took effect on July 1, 2006. This directive restricts the use of six hazardous materials in the manufacture of various types of electronic and electrical equipment.

Ever since the establishment of IC Realtime, we have worked closely with our partners and part suppliers to make sure the all our products are RoHS compliant – not only the products (parts and/or complete products) we manufactured and/or imported into EU countries, but also that of other world regions that RoHS directive are not enforced. In USA and EU countries, all components we source locally, such as DVDRW, Computer Hard Drives, Cables, Monitors, etc., are also required to be RoHS compliant.

In designing security solutions for the market, we have adopted the LHMS (less hardware, more software) approach from which you can see the dramatic reduction in size and weight of our DVR products – this results in less materials required for production and less cost in packing and shipping.

During IC Realtime's internal day-to-day operation, we have also encouraged environmental friendly practices: reduce, reuse, and recycle. While the size of our company has grown by more than 5 times, our revenue grow 400%, our operation cost on materials like hydro, papers, printer inks, and packing materials only doubles. With customers' permission, we have re-used many packaging materials (boxes, forms) while maintaining the same high standard of quality and service.

IC Realtime LLC invites all dealers to work together to protect our environment. We are in the business of protecting our customers safety and security of their valuables. Let's also join hands in the effort to leave a better environment to our children.

Thanks!
